Best Electoral System Test

The choice of an electoral system is one of the most important institutional decisions for any democracy. New democracies must choose an electoral system, while in established democracies political crisis may lead to momentum for electoral system change or campaigners for political reform may attempt to put electoral system change onto the agenda.

The Best Electoral System Test (BEST) allows those involved in the debate on electoral system design to explore the characteristics of twelve common electoral systems in a simple and interactive way. Step by step users can set their priorities for 16 properties on a scale from "Not important" to "Very important" and immediately see a list of best matching electoral systems.

Start BEST by setting your priorities in the left box below, click "Next" after each priority and follow how the list of best matching electoral systems develops on the right.

The yellow progress bar shows how many of the 16 priorities you have already set. You are free at any time to move back and adjust previously selected priorities to see how this affects the results.

Note that in most cases no system will be a perfect match, but the top scoring systems are the ones that come closest to your needs. Use the scrollbar on the right to see more systems and to what extent they match.

Limited Vote (LV)

82%

Limited Vote is a candidate-centred electoral system used in multi-member districts in which electors have more than one vote, but fewer votes than there are candidates to be elected. The candidates with the highest vote totals win the seats.

Block Vote (BV)

Block Vote is a plurality/majority system used in multi-member districts. Electors have as many votes as there are candidates to be elected. The candidates with the highest vote totals win the seats. Usually voters vote for candidates rather than parties and in most systems may use as many, or as few, of their votes as they wish.
